

Eat It Up

by Meryl Levin \(Subscribe to Meryl Levin's posts\)

Mar 8th 2010 2:00PM

0 COMMENTS

Filed under: Baby Essentials, Feeding & Sleeping, Gear Guides: Babies

 Like

Step aside, spork. Credit: Momma/Ginsey Home Solutions

There have been few innovations made to the humble spoon in recent years (unless you count the spork), but this new design by Momma is real game-changer. The clip-on cover keeps it clean within the depths of your diaper bag, and then becomes a handle when attached to the opposite end (genius!) The spoon itself is freestanding, so you can feel fine about resting it on a table when you need a free hand, even if you're someplace less than sanitary (brilliant!) Plus, with its weighted bottom, the spoon can double as a toy -- sort of a high-chair version of those punching bag clowns (seriously, somebody deserves a raise.)

Available for $7 at mommaus.com

The clip-on cover keeps it clean within the depths of your diaper bag, and then becomes a handle when attached to the opposite end (genius!) The spoon itself is freestanding, so you can feel fine about resting it on a table when you need a free hand, even if you're someplace less than sanitary (brilliant!) Plus, with its weighted bottom, the spoon can double as a toy -- sort of a high-chair version of those punching bag clowns (seriously, somebody deserves a raise.)

Available for $7 at mommaus.com

FollowUs

Facebook

Twitter

Flickr

RSS

Newsletter

AskAdviceMama

My 13-year-old son is awful to his younger sister. What can I do?

AdviceMama Says:

Allow your son to express his emotions, but offer safe, acceptable outlets for his anger.

Read more

SEE ALL
62
QUESTIONS